OBITUARIES.

The funeral of Joseph Bouillon, an old resident of this City, was held Saturday morning from St. Mary's Church of which he had been a member. Mr. Bouillon was well known in the City and held in high esteem by a large number of friends who gathered at the church to pay their last respects. Deceased was sixty-four years of age. A widow and a large family of grown up sons and daughters survive him.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hixson, who resides on a farm six miles south of the City, died Sunday. The funeral was held Monday from the Hixson home, Dr. Fayer of the Baptist Church officiating. The body was brought to this City and interred at Forest Home cemetery.

COUNTY JAIL EMPTY.

What does this mean? The county jail is empty. Can it be that Oneida County has turned over a new leaf with the beginning of 1907 and is going to be good, or have all the bad men "skidded" to cities where the officers of the law are less vigilant? However, regardless of what the reason may be, the fact remains the same that the Oneida County Jail is without even a single prisoner for the first time in many moons. When Felix Dolan the new sheriff, assumed charge of his office Monday noon and made an inspection of the jail, he gazed at corridors of empty cells and aside from the occasional scurrying of a mouse across the cold stone floors, not a sign of life could be detected and the silence which reigned was indeed oppressive. "A nice state of affairs" sighed Sheriff Dolan, "My first day and not a soul to greet me" and he turned the key in the big lock with a loud click that echoed weirdly through the gray walls and hurrying to the New North job office caused a sign to be printed bearing this simple sentence, "Prisoners Wanted."

GARNER LED IN BATTING.

Following are the batting averages of the Rhinelander Base Ball team. This however, does not include all the games played last season, namely, Eagle River and Dunbar, which were as one may call them, only practice games. Bruce here, the game at Wausau and the game at Hurley in June we have no record of. Rhinelander won nine and lost five games. O'Mella made the most runs:

Games	At Bat	Runs	Per Cent
Garnier	32	7	14.37

CHURCH SOCIETY MEETS.

The Norwegian Danish Ev. Lutheran Church of this City held its annual meeting last Friday. From the reports of various boards and officers the church appeared to be in most prosperous condition. Officers elected for the year were:

Chairman—Rev. Knudson.
Secretary—Martin Erickson.
Treasurer—Hans Anderson.
Member of Board of Deacons—John Fremsted.
Member of Board of Trus.—Ole Rindal.
Sunday School Supt.—Ed. Liness.

A resolution was adopted thanking all the business men and other residents of Rhinelander who assisted so liberally toward the building of the new church which was dedicated last fall.

GETS SIX MONTHS.

At his preliminary hearing last Friday, Frank Jostumbski plead guilty to the charge of grand larceny and was allowed to go before County Judge Billings for sentence. Jostumbski received six months in the State penitentiary at Waupun and was taken there Friday night by Sheriff W. T. Stevens.

The man stole three watches valued at $36.50 from a boarding house on Brown Street and was shortly after arrested. He is a Polisher about forty years of age. Jostumbski was the last prisoner taken to Waupun by Sheriff Stevens before the expiration of his term of office.

NEW MANAGEMENT.

Mrs. Belle Hebert, formerly proprietor of the Tobin House in Tomahawk, has taken the management of the Oneida Hotel in this City. The Oneida has been thoroughly cleaned and refurnished and is now one of the most up-to-date and home like hotels in the City. Mrs. Hebert comes highly recommended as a hotel lady and under her direction the Oneida will no doubt be a success. Mrs. Paul has been engaged as cook which means that the culinary department will be looked after to perfection.

APPOINTS SECRETARY.

Congressman-elect Morse of the tenth district has appointed as his private secretary Chas. Good of Ashland. Mr. Good was, until lately manager for the Wisconsin Telephone Co. at that City.

MASON-DONALDSON LBR. CO.'S NEW OPERATIONS AT STATE LINE.

The 'Mason-Donaldson Lbr. Co.'s new saw mill at State Line will be completed and in running order by Jan. 25. The mill is of the band and horizontal band resaw type with a capacity of 100,000 feet every twenty hours. The planing mill has been added to and improved by a band resaw and other new machinery.

The planing mill is running and is dressing the Hackley lumber, whose cut the Mason-Donaldson Lbr. Co. purchased. The Company owns its own railroad from State Line into the timber, a large amount of which is in close proximity to State Line. The Company operates its own camps, Myron Mather having charge of the mill operations and A. M. Riley as superintendent of the logging operations. It is the intention of the Company to run the mills day and night the year round. A large number of men will be employed in the mills and also in the camps. This employment will be steady on account of the continuous running of the mills.

About thirty-two good and comfortable houses have been erected and more will be built in the spring. The Company succeeded in getting the Vilas County Board to set off the town of State Line last week.

While the mill operations will be conducted at State Line, yet the sale of lumber will be handled by the Mason-Donaldson Lbr. Co. at their main office in Rhinelander.

HOLD JOINT INSTALLATION.

The I. O. F. and the Rebekah lodges of this City held a joint installation of officers in the lodge rooms on Stevens Street Monday evening. The new Odd Fellow officers are: N. G.—Herman Zander. V. G.—James A. Conro. Sec.—Ed. Miles. Fin. Sec.—Elmer Danfield.

Treas.—H. P. Morrill. Chaplain—Peter LaPorte. Rebekah officers are: N. G.—Sadie Lee. V. G.—Margaret Shelp. Sec.—Mrs. Gertrude Conro. Fin. Sec.—James A. Conro. Treas.—Mrs. L. Cleary. H. A. Barber was installing officer for the I. O. F. and Mrs. E. R. Miles for the Rebekahs. The work was followed by a banquet.

MEETING POSTPONED.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Rhinelander Paper Co., which was to have been held Monday evening was, owing to the small number present as well as the severity of weather, postponed until Thursday evening. At an annual meeting of a company of this magnitude many things of great importance are brought up and it is to the interests of all the stockholders, big or small to attend this postponed meeting.

HOLD ANNUAL MEETINGS

The annual meetings of the stockholders of the Rhinelander Power Company and of the White River Power Company were held Monday at the Rhinelander Power Company's office on Davenport Street. The officers and directors of each Company were re-elected for the ensuing year.

MERCHANTS SHOULD ADVERTISE.

If a merchant can afford to devote his time and consideration to his holiday advertising, when people have the inclination to buy anyway, how much more important should it be that his advertising have his attention during the remainder of the year, when there are no special reasons for buying on the part of the customer.

REV. WILSON HAS RETURNED.

Rev. A. G. Wilson has returned from Chicago and will preach in the Congregational Church next Sunday morning and evening.

MARRIAGES.

At Louisville, Kentucky, on Dec. 19, occurred the marriage of Miss Susan Hathaway to Frank B. Moody. Since last May Mr. Moody has been Assistant Forester of Wisconsin and has charge of the field work and the forest lands in the State. Both young people are graduates of Michigan University and have come to this City with the intention of locating here.

Louis DeNoyer of this City and Lotta Glue of Milwaukee were married Saturday at the bride's home. Both young people are well known in Rhinelander and will return here to make their home.

Miss Bessie Deakin and George D. Williams, two young people of Pardeeville, this state, were married Monday evening at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. C. H. Kincaid in this City. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Evans of the M. E. Church. Mr. Williams is the owner of a large rolling mill in Brandon. The newly wedded couple leave this evening for their home in Pardeeville.

WATER WORKS.

Agitation of municipal ownership of public utilities by one sister city, Merrill is being discussed as follows:

The question whether the City shall buy the water works of this City, comes up for settlement this year. The News believes that the City should own the water works. We know of no reason why the City cannot operate the water works as economically and efficiently as the present corporation. Surely the American Guarantee & Water Company are not in this City for their health. They are here for profit and not for pleasure. So then, as a plain business proposition, the City can safely enter upon the conduct of this public utility. In fact, the City is entitled to the profit, either in cheaper water rate or in money consideration. The City was never in better financial condition than it is today, and if the City shall ever own the water works now is as good a time as any, to acquire the same.

In this connection, The News suggests that the City should also establish its own lighting plant in connection with the water works. Practically the cost of operation would be about the same for the two.

Our sister City of Wausau owns its own water works and the people of Wausau would never think for a moment of turning its water works plant over to a private corporation. Wausau has also found it advantageous to own its own lights. That is, Wausau owns the lights for streets and public buildings, poles and lines, and buys the electricity necessary to light the City.

The News believes now is a splendid time to consider this proposition as well. In a few months the Grandfather Falls Company will, no doubt, have electricity to sell. Our City then is in the position to receive the benefits arising out of competition that will likely result between the two corporations here having electricity to dispose of. Wausau has no such opportunity because it has to buy its electricity from the only corporation that has that commodity there.

If no competition could be had the City could purchase the Delta Improved water power, perhaps, from the Merrill Paper Manufacturing Co. and it would own power enough to run the water works plant and furnish electricity for lighting purposes as well.

These are mere suggestions on our part. They are, however, of such importance that the people should consider them carefully. The City is like a private individual doing business. It should take advantage of modern inventions and profit by the experience of other cities. No one gives the City anything and so it should on all occasions and for all purposes drive as good a bargain as possible.

The City today enjoys as able, as competent and as patriotic City officials as it ever enjoyed in its history. Now is the time to do business. The opportunity is here.—Merrill News.

HITS LIQUOR DEALERS.

Retail liquor dealers have been notified to prepare for following the rules of the pure food laws relative to liquors. The pure food laws relative to the liquor dealers went into effect on January 1. The law requires that it shall be the duty of the liquor dealers to label every bottle from which liquor is sold at retail. The decanters that sit on the back bar and from which whiskey is sold by the glass, shall be labeled. These labels must tell exactly the brand of the beverage; if it is pure, blended, adulterated, rye, corn or whatever it might be. The fine for the violation of this provision of pure food law is heavy.

In addition to the labeling of the contents of the decanters and other vessels where whiskey is sold by the quart or pint each bottle must carry labels certifying to the fact that it is a full quart or a full pint. The majority of the bottles sold for quarts really hold considerably less than one fourth gallon. The law relative to the name of the liquor and the contents of the bottles is very strict and the fine is quite heavy.

P. O. BOX RENT NOT RAISED.

So far as the Post Office is concerned, there is no change in box rent while the re is a general order to the effect that box rent in general will be adjusted, yet there is no prospect of an immediate change anywhere until this whole matter has had a personal examination. This may be years.

The celebrated Smart Set, Loretta and Colonial chocolate creams are on sale at Bronson's.

NIGHT SCHOOL OF STENOGRAPHY.

Why not join the night school of shorthand and typewriting and become a competent stenographer. The work will be taken up thoroughly, and only the most approved methods will be used. The Munson system of shorthand, and touch typewriting will be taught. For speed, accuracy, consistency, system and legibility, the Munson plan of shorthand writing is without a rival. Touch typewriting is equally important. Experience has demonstrated that it is not only practical but that it is superior to all other methods in speed, accuracy, and evenness of touch.

Young man—young woman—if you are not satisfied with your present position or the returns it is bringing you, why not take up a night course in stenography and be prepared to fill one of the many positions that are opening up every day.

CUPID TO THE RESCUE

By Florence Wilkinson

(Copyright, 1936, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Eloise Guild, in her wheelchair, nestled her fair head wearily against her cushions. All her world was abroad today, in the glorious air and sun of one of New York's fall days.

She smiled wearily in greeting her friend, Katherine Clement, who appeared at the door, rosy amid her furs and lace, her hands full of red lighthouse roses.

"I am always glad to see your room the same jolly old place," said Katherine, brightly. "It has never been changed since the accident, has it?"

"Never," replied Eloise, bitterly. "Together, the room and I stopped living. You know, Katherine, I should not be existing now if I had not heard the doctor's verdict—that big specialist, Dr. Von Humburg—'I don't attempt to remember his name.'"

"What did he say, Eloise?" "I overheard him tell mamma that there was no hope for me, and I resolved to live in defiance of Dr. Von Humburg. It was my perversity, you see, that saved me."

"If you would only let me bring Dr. Farnsworth to see you!" "I have no doubt he is a most estimable gentleman," she replied, "but excuse me from knowing any more physicians."

"Ah, there he goes now!" exclaimed Katherine, suddenly parting the draperies of the window at which she sat. "Hugo Farnsworth. How well he drives! I like to see a man like him handle the lines."

"Describe him!" said Eloise, her face reflecting faintly the glow on Katherine's features.

"Impossible, categorically. Massive head, finely shaped; dark hair, tumbled; brown eyes, serious at night. But this doesn't describe him, Eloise. You and he should just get together and then you would see. They say he was all the rage in Paris when he studied there. You ask your father to send for him."

Upon consultation with Mr. Guild Katherine decided that it would be better for Dr. Farnsworth to meet Eloise at first unprofessionally, and have a chance to study the case unhampered by the relationship of doctor and patient.

In the seclusion of her chamber Eloise learned of the growing friendship between her father and the brilliant young physician, Dr. Farnsworth.

Her curiosity was finally piqued, till on a certain afternoon she was brought down to the library where she sat in her wheelchair before the fire.

"Eloise, I wish to present Dr. Farnsworth," said her father, and she shook hands with a tall, brown-haired man, whose eyes looked searchingly into her own.

What happens sometimes, but rarely, happened with these two. In their first long conversation they glided the whole world of thought with light exchanges of comment and finally clasped hands on common territory.

When Dr. Farnsworth left, they had already reached that stage of acquaintanceship where books are exchanged with passages marked in them by one, for the other's appreciation.

Dr. Farnsworth called repeatedly within the next few weeks, generally having the pretext of some errand.

As the weeks went by Eloise became more absorbed in this new friendship. Here was a man of intellect who did not consider it condescension to exchange opinions with her. And she was no longer a belle whose friendship might be desirable for a young physician. He was not attracted by her beauty and high spirits, as had been men in the past.

"You think too cold and philosophic," she said to Katherine, after one of his calls, "and you admire me for it. Other people think me cold and philosophic, and disapprove of me for it. It takes my mind as he would a man's. There is no sex in minds."

"But there is the avatars of them and that amounts to the same thing," answered the profoundly illogical Katherine.

As for Hugo Farnsworth, he, the psychologist, found himself more profoundly moved than he would have cared to admit, by the ease of Miss Guild. He had been interested, self-centrally at first, then intellectually, and, in the end, against his will, emotionally. It had not been his purpose to become emotionally interested in Miss Guild. On the other hand, it had been his purpose not to do so. He was a man of ambition. He was well aware that Miss Guild's recovery, under his attendance, would mean for him—distinction.

It was May. He came with a bunch of wake-robins which he carefully arranged in a low glass dish which he placed on a table by her side. The movements of his hands were gentle and dexterous. Eloise watched them with pleasure.

"I have been in the country—" There had been an unusual softness, pathos about Eloise's expression before he spoke, but at these simple words of his her eyes became misty.

"And have brought you wake-robins almost as white and fragile as yourself."

It was the first reference he had made to her ill-health, and all at once Eloise felt inexplicably happier. A burden rolled off her mind as of a question pending which has at last been solved.

Eloise could scarcely have told of what they talked that afternoon. His speech was full of the spring—the green meadows he had seen, and the amble of the germinating earth.

And when he was about to go, she roused herself as from a delicious dream. He came and stood by her, saying, as his brown eyes looked down into hers: "I fear I have worried you, Miss Guild, telling you of those woods where I hope to take you myself some day."

As he spoke, he laid his hand gently upon her hand, which rested, white as if carved from ivory, upon the arm of the chair.

"You will pardon me if for once I am professional," he said; and his tones were so tender that his touch still felt like a caress. When he had left, his touch seemed still pulsing through her blood; his presence still filled the room when the last rays of the May sun gilded the drooping leaves of the wake-robins by her side.

As he strode along Central Park through the fast increasing darkness, Dr. Farnsworth was lost in deep thought. He recalled her eyes as they had shone with violet depth, and the whiteness of her forehead, when

How to Retain Youthful Appearance of the Nose

Handsome noses are few and far between. Even those that are well shaped are often spoiled by large pores and red or purple tips, and—worst of all—age, says the beauty doctor, shows first in the nose; so the woman who wants to keep her youth and improve her looks must be up and doing.

Massage, which does such wonders for every part of the body, is most necessary if the youthful appearance of the nose is to be retained. Go about the massage gently, but thoroughly. Soap the nose once a day and scrub it with a cloth. The skin's texture will become finer and the nose will keep young.

If the skin is very coarse and ugly and the pores large (a very common misfortune among womankind alas!), treat your nose to a daily benzoinated bath for awhile. Use tepid water, into which enough benzoin has been poured to make it milky. Benzoin is one of the best skin tonics and astringents in the world; but if you don't care for it, a daily nose bath in pure alcohol or witch hazel will have very much the same effect, used with discretion. The result of these baths should begin to be apparent at the end of a week, anyhow.

If your nose inclines a little too much to one side, press it gently toward the other. If it is too fat, a little judicious pinching is bound to help matters. If it tilts skyward, press it gently down. If it droops too much, your task is harder. There is very little to do except changing your nature or dressing so as to make the length less apparent.

Suggestions of Value to Hostess and Guests

A Conundrum Luncheon.

This scheme offers a pleasing way to entertain. For the centerpiece have a large interrogation point of small flowers—a daisy will make the form which may be filled with sand and the flowers have the appearance of growing. The name cards should also be question marks cut from cardboard. Any color that the hostess selects should be carried out in the place cards, and the covers of the little booklets which contain the conundrums. For ornamentation draw the figure of an owl sitting on the branch of a tree and a large interrogation point.

Specimens of the questions are given below, but of course each hostess will have others she wishes to add:

When is it easy to read in the woods?—When autumn turns the leaves.

Why are the western prairies flat?—Because the sun sets on them every night.

Which is the largest room in the world?—Room for improvement.

When is a cup like a cat?—When you toss it.

Why is it dangerous to walk abroad in the springtime?—Because the grass is putting forth blades, every flower has a pistol, the trees are shooting and the bullfrogs are out.

Why is a washerwoman the greatest traveler on record?—Because she crosses the line and goes from pole to pole.

If you throw a stone that is white into the Red sea, what will it become?—Not.

What is the difference between a duck that has one wing and one that has two?—Merely a difference of a platoon.

Why is a schoolboy being flogged like your eye?—Because he's a pupil under the lash.

Why doesn't Sweden send her cattle abroad?—Because she keeps her Stockholm.

What is the difference between a clock and a partnership?—When a clock is wound up it goes; when a firm is wound up it stops.

What belongs to yourself and is used by your friends more than yourself?—Your name.

What is the center of gravity?—The letter V.

A Miscellaneous Shower.

In reply to the request from a correspondent for a "shower," we think by way of novelty this scheme probably exceeds any "shower" yet bestowed upon a bride-elect. Twelve close friends made out a list of things very useful but very often forgotten in the best regulated families. When the afternoon arrived for the farrowed tea, a huge paper sack was deposited at the feet of the honored guest with the request to look for anything she did not have, or could not find. As the didn't have, or could not find, the couple were going right to housekeeping the contents were purchased with that thought in mind.

The following are some of the objects: A paper of tacks, ball of string, box of needles, labels for bottles, box of wax matches, lead pencils, clipping scissors, tack-hammer, cork-screw, memorandum pad and a bottle of ink.

A Novel Hunt.

of the house for a week end party and ten equally jolly men received notes to appear at eight o'clock to participate in a hunt for "deer."

Not a girl was in sight and the hostess explained that a half hour would be allowed for discovering the whereabouts of each lassie.

And what fun they had, the girls had shown great ingenuity in stowing themselves away, but all were hunted down except the tallest, slimmest girl in the crowd; she finally was brought to bay inside of a man's ulster hanging on the rack.

A chafing dish supper completed a very merry evening.

The "hunt" was started by a blast from a horn, and each hunter had to play fair, bagging only one "deer."

MADAME MERRI.

Soft Tones Rule.

Lovely tones in broadcloth and velvet own their origin to frost-tinted foliage and all the autumn flowers, dahlias, chrysanthemums and asters, whose rich shades have been faithfully reproduced by the skillful dyer.

All these mellow tones have supplanted garish effects—vivid greens, intense purples, reds and blues of the past. Suppleness of texture and studied color schemes unite in bringing out a charming softness both in tone and character. Along with all these wonderful hues come moon-stone gray and ivory white in soft-faced cloth and chiffon velvet. A touch of vivid color is added to costumes made of either shade, or sometimes garnishments of silver for the gray effects and gold for the white ones.

Touch Up the Blue Outfit.

To complete a blue suit the platted neck ruffs of navy blue maline are as pretty as possible. These are either all blue, or have a little white about them, and have either small fine dots or large velvet ones. They have blue ribbon loops and ends, and an astonishingly pretty one can be bought for so little as $3.

A Point to Remember.

One of the main points to be recorded in relation to smart outer garments, whether they be the wrap proper or short tailored coat, is that the short sleeve is on the wane. Three-quarter and full-length effects are growing more and more popular, being handsomely finished with cuffs of their own or contrasting material.

Velvet Bolero

The bolero is of gray and white checked velvet trimmed with straps and buttons of the same, the latter encircled with velvet rims.

The collar and shoulder straps are of cerise velvet. The under cuffs and wide girdle are of plain gray velvet, of which the plain, untrimmed skirt is also made.

At a meeting of the stewards of the Inter-collegiate Rowing association held at New York, it was decided that the list of events will be the same as that of last year's four oared variety, freshmen eight oared shell, and varsity eight. It was decided to hold the 1937 regatta on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie June 26.

A team of cricketers, to be selected from the cricket clubs of Philadelphia, will sail for Bermuda February 23 and will return to this city March 6. While in Bermuda the 11 will play three two day matches with the Hamilton team. About 25 men will be in the party.

For a second time Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and Tommy Burns have reached an agreement to fight for the heavyweight championship and signed

How to Become Expert at the Bowling Game

A Few Pointers to Beginners by Frank Brill—Brief History of the Sport.

Frank Brill, of Chicago, or better known as Pop, one of the best known bowlers of the country, having played in special matches both in the east and west, tells in his own words how to become an expert at the popular game. Brill is well known to local bowlers and many good pointers may be gathered from his story:

"The game of bowling requires almost as much preparation as any game that is played today. Until one acquires form he will tire himself at the game and accomplish poor results. It is a game that requires a great deal of strength to become expert, but this may gradually be developed.

"Care should be taken in every movement until one has learned to work like a machine. Many a star player has been put out of a big match through the simple cause of getting excited and failing to watch the balls as they come in on the runway, with a smashed finger or thumb as a result.

"Little suggestions can be given to players as to correct position to take when aiming for the head pin, every man having more or less his own style best fitted for his build and method of letting go of the ball. General suggestions are to take a position about three long steps back of the foul line with a little allowance for the slide.

"A player soon learns which position is best suited to him, it all depending on whether he uses a center

As was the rule with everything of that period, the sport was known by a variety of names. It was called "bowls," "French bowls" and "carrean."

Those three names seem to have been the most common. At that time the game was very different from the present sport, but there was much similarity. The game was played with teams, as today. The balls—or bowls, as they were then called—were made of stone, one-half spherical, the other half oval shape. This gave the ball a curve as it sped down the bowling alley or green, as an alley was called in that day. The scene of the game was a plot of ground called a rink or bowling green, at each end of which was placed a cone, which was the mark for the bowlers to roll into. The cones were bowled to from one end of the rink and then from the other.

The object of the game was for one side to place the ball nearer the cone than its opponents. Thus the side bowling would try and knock their opponents' ball away from the cone, supplanting their own, as in the game of quoits, the nearer the cone scoring one point for his team. Skill was required to bowl so as to get nearer the cone without knocking the opponent's ball closer.

Later the stone ball was supplanted by one made of lignum vitae. The latter being made spherical, the outside of the tree from which the balls were made being lighter than the heart, naturally gave the ball the desired basis for a curve. Some bowlers loaded one side of the ball with a heavy metal, so as to obtain the desired effect for a curve.

The cones were finally done away with and superseded by a stone or earthen ball about three and one-half ball, a slide delivery, either right or left, or the numerous versions of the cross alley, back-up or other styles. As a general rule the right foot should be forward with the weight of the ball resting on the other hand than that used to deliver the ball.

"The swing which occurs just before the ball leaves the hand is one of the most difficult things for the new bowler to get just right, too many players letting the ball swing back of them until the arm is nearly horizontal. Back of a certain point too much of a swing loses a lot of power, while it also affects the accuracy of the shot. I use a smaller swing probably than any bowler of class in the city, my swing being supplemented with a little push as the ball leaves my hand. The style is a difficult one for a beginner to learn, but once mastered shows immediately in an improved bowling is about the most popular indoor winter sport of this country, and is also one of the oldest games known to the civilized world. Our ancestors hundreds of years ago indulged in a pastime which, excepting a few radical changes during the last century or so, was substantially the same as the present game of bowling and seems to have been just as popular with them.

Bowling seems to have been originated early in the middle ages. It was at that time purely an outdoor sport.

Inches in diameter. These new ones were known as "jacks." Instead of having a stationary mark at which to bowl, the jack was knocked all over the green, and it required strategy and skill to play a good game.

The game was introduced into America early in the eighteenth century. It seems to have been very popular in New York. In 1792 there was a locality in New York called Bowling Green, and it is still known by that name. From the time that the sport was introduced into America it has rarely ever died out, although the outdoor game has long since given way to the indoor.

As an indoor game the sport originated from several games, among which were Cayles, French quilles, skittles, loggits and styles. In the game of cayles and loggits conical-shaped pins made of bone were set in rows of six or eight, and the players tried to knock them down by throwing balls at them. Knocking the pins down by bowling a ball came at a much later period. The sport was stopped for a short time by some laws which prohibited the playing of nine pins and similar games.

The first game known to have been played indoors was on a covered alley some time in the twelfth century. The first match game indoors in this country was a game played on the Knickerbocker alleys in New York on January 1, 1840. Until 1875 there was

The Brooklyn baseball club has signed a new pitcher, George C. Bell of Albany. Bell pitched for the Tri State league last season. John C. Butler, who caught for the Jersey City team last season, also has signed with Brooklyn.

Edward B. Cochems, the former Wisconsin football star who has been coaching the St. Louis university team, has signed a three-year contract as athletic director of that institution. Cochems has been wonderfully successful there from the start.

At a meeting of the stewards of the Inter-collegiate Rowing association held at New York, it was decided that the list of events will be the same as that of last year's four oared variety, freshmen eight oared shell, and varsity eight. It was decided to hold the 1937 regatta on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie June 26.

THE PROGRESS OF THE CANADIAN WEST.

Nearly 200,000 of an increase in Canada's immigration in 1936.

The progress of a new country cannot be better ascertained than by noting the increase of railroad mileage in its transportation system, and, judged by this standard, the Canadian West leads all the countries in the world during the current year. Thirty years ago there was not one hundred miles of railroad west of the Great Lakes, and very little prospect of a transcontinental route for many years to come, but by the end of 1935 the Canadian Pacific Railway was within measurable distance of completion, and last year—twenty years later—over 6,000 miles of railroad traversed the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

In the past year the work of railroad construction has been vigorously prosecuted, and by the end of 1936, some 5,000 miles of completed railroad has been added, making a total of fully 11,000 miles in the three great grain producing provinces of Canada. Such an increase in the transportation facilities of the country is bound to make good times not only in the districts where the railroad are being built, but throughout the entire west. Allowing $20,000 a mile for construction, the sum of $100,000,000 will be put in circulation, and this in itself should cause good times to prevail in a land where work is plentiful, wages are high, and the cost of living is moderate.

But the building of new railroads through Western Canada means a greater benefit to the country than merely the money put in circulation by the cost of construction. Additional railway building means the opening of new agricultural districts and an additional acre under crops; a largely increased output of grain to foreign markets with consequent financial returns; the erection of elevators and the growth of villages, towns and cities; and everything else that makes for the progress of national life, and the opening up of additional thousands of free homesteads, so extensively advertised by the Canadian government agent, whose address appears elsewhere.

It was stated on the floor of the Canadian Parliament recently by a prominent representative that ten years from now would see the bulk of the population of Canada residing west of the Great Lakes, and if the work of railway building during the present year is any criterion, the prospect made by the Canadian statesman may be easily fulfilled inside of the time stated. During the present year no less than 189,064 persons have found homes in the Canadian west, of whom 57,796 were Americans who have seen the great possibilities of this new West, and have decided to cast in their lot with it. Certainly, our neighbor north of the 49th parallel is making a great record, and deserves the success that appears to be coming its way.

Insist on Insularity.

The people of Cornwall's coast object to the Great Western Railway company applying foreign names to their climate and scenery. One advertisement called a certain locality the "English Riviera," and a Cornishman at a meeting of protest the other night said Cornwall had "nothing to gain by being called after something in the south of France or a dirty little Italian town."

The Language of Commerce.

Great Britain and her colonies and the United States represent together the fabulous total of 111,000,000 English-speaking persons, figures which leave all competitors hopeless in the rear. Germany and Russia occupy second place with 75,000,000 apiece, and France, Spain, Italy and Portugal follow, with 51,000,000, 43,000,000, 33,000,000 and 13,000,000 respectively, according to The Atlas of the World's Commerce.

Monarchs as Linguists.

Monarchs must know more than one language. King Edward, who traveled so much, speaks French better than some Frenchmen, and also German. The czar of Russia speaks French as well as his native tongue and knows the numerous dialects. Emperor William of Germany speaks French and English correctly, and is also well versed in Latin. The king of Spain, the youngest of all, speaks German with ease and also French and English. Because of his marriage he now practices the latter. The king of Portugal speaks French, English, German and Spanish. The king of Italy is a master of French and German and is also well versed in the various Italian dialects.

RETURN TO PURITAN LAW.

Are some of the New England States going back to the enforcement of laws enacted in their early history? Friday, the following additions were made to the list of unlawful Sunday doings:

Bread cannot be baked or delivered by wagon.
Ice cream cannot be delivered at residences.
Instrumental music cannot be furnished in hotel dining-rooms.
Butter cannot be delivered to hotels.
Sawls cannot be taken from hotels.
Windows cannot be washed.
Artificial ice cannot be made.
Sand cannot be carted for street railways.

Photographs cannot be taken.
Waste paper cannot be transported from business offices.
Fuel cannot be packed in bags.
Tar pots cannot be cleaned.
Potatoes, groceries and "tonics" cannot be sold.

About 1000 violators of the previous Sunday were up before the courts and nothing except words of necessity or charity on the Lord's Day is to be countenanced.

Has all the rising generation "gone west" that these fossilized laws are dug up and enforced? Will the next step be punishment for witchcraft? Massachusetts without doubt is neither better nor worse than most States and it would seem that its citizens might find better employment for their energies. There would be a happy medium between the rigid enforcement of the laws in Massachusetts and the reckless violation of law and order in Northern Wisconsin.

STATE SCHOOL BOARD AGITATION.

Since the removal of T. B. Pray of Stevens Point Normal through the influence of the local regent of that City, Mr. McFarlane, a large number of the Superintendents and Principals have been bitterly opposed to the present regent system under which, every town containing a Normal School has a local regent, aside from four other members of the regular Board of Regents, making the Board consist of eleven members, seven of whom were directly interested in the Normal Schools in their own towns. It has too often been the case under this system, that a single Regent has succeeded in removing the President from his local Normal School or has been able to have large sums of money spent upon his Normal to the detriment of some of the weaker schools.

Practically all the members of the Board are business men, who are shrewd politicians and not educators in any sense of the word. They ridicule an educator who attempts to become a member of the Board. This sentiment has been the means of much thought and discussion as to the creation of a new Board to succeed the present Normal School Regency and without doubt will be presented at the coming session of the legislature. Of course, men, who are benighted by the old system, will bitterly oppose the new system. Already a large element of LaFollette supporters claim it is a move to get rid of men appointed by Gov. LaFollette and secure in their stead on the new Board, men, a majority of whom are stalwarts. To the great majority of Superintendents, this seems a false alarm. The Board of Regents in its present form is an old organization in this State and conditions are developing to fully demonstrate that something should be done to remedy the evils of the body, whether it be a new board or a modification of the existing one. L. W. Wood, present State Inspector of district schools, believes that a single board could be created in place of the Board of Normal Regents and the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin which would remove many of the objections to the two existing boards.

The following is a letter, written by Mr. Wood:

TO THE EDITOR: In recent issues of the Free Press considerable space has been given to the question of the abolishment of the boards of regents now controlling the normal schools and the State university, and of having in their stead a state board of education.

As one who has spent the best years of his life in educational work in this state, I very much deplore the spirit manifested by some of the opponents of the plan whom the Free Press has interviewed on this very important question. Possibly some arguments have been offered against having a state board of education, but if so I have failed to see them. All the contributions to the literature of this subject that have come to my notice have been substantially as follows:

First—"Abolishment of regents a political move."
Second—"Stalwarts see in the movement an opportunity to bring about the removal of some men who were appointed by LaFollette."

Third—"The movement is fostered by W. N. Parker, who was a member of the state department of education under the administration of L. D. Harvey."

Fourth—"The movement is based on the hope that Gov. Davidson might be led to appoint stalwarts, or at least those who have been more or less hostile to the LaFollette movement in Wisconsin." "Of course other arguments are used because they must be used, but the real significance of the plan is political," etc.

Let me assure the thousands of readers of the Free Press that this is not a political movement—far from it. I am not stalwart and never have been. (I suspect that this statement admits of quite positive proof.) Notwithstanding this, however, I am in hearty sympathy with this movement which has for its object the establishment of a state board of education, and I am neither ashamed nor afraid to have the people of Wisconsin know it. Furthermore, there are many other educational men, including Democrats and Republicans of both breeds, who also favor this plan and we propose to fight for it even though to secure it may require a change in the constitution of the state. No, this is not a political movement, but it is a movement which has for its ultimate object the unification of the discordant systems of education now existing in our state. At present we have no "system of education in Wisconsin" but instead a number of systems which have been for years and are at the present time working at cross purposes, fighting among themselves like the historic cats of Kilkenny. Such a condition of things is radically wrong, and in the interest of the young people of our state, for whose benefit the public schools are maintained, this wrong should be righted as speedily as possible. This movement is bigger than any man in the state, it is bigger than any political party or any faction of any political party in the state, for it involves the interests of every tax payer in the state and furthermore it also involves the educational interests of the thousands who are now attending our public schools and of the thousands who will attend them in the future.

Our opponents need not flatter themselves that by setting up the cry of politics they will be able to convince the people of the state that this movement is wrong and has for its basis nothing but peanut politics, for they are weary of the everlasting wrangling among the various educational systems of the state and of the state and of the policy that puts great plans involving the expenditure of a million dollars annually of their hard earned money into the hands of men, men of honesty and integrity no doubt, but whose services are given gratuitously to the state and who therefore do not and cannot give time enough to the business to master the problem of the particular system they represent, much less to master the greater problem of what relations among the different systems should prevail in order that all may work together in harmony, each being a help to the other instead of a hindrance—I say, they are weary of all this, and I am sure they will welcome a free and fair discussion directed along lines of possible improvement.

We, who favor the plan of a state board of education, will gladly welcome our opponents to a contest of arguments on this vital question of unifying our various and discordant systems, but we do hope that neither we nor the people of the state will be treated to any more such political hope as has been served up in the Free Press for the past few weeks. Permit me to submit the following question, to which I invite the careful consideration of all intelligent men and women who have at heart the best interests of the educational affairs of the state.

Would not a state board of education be preferable to the boards of regents of the normal schools and the state university, such board to be organized on the following or some similar plan?

First—The number of members to be five.

Second—The number of ex-officio members two; namely, the state superintendent of public instruction and the attorney general.

Third—Three paid members who are to devote their entire time to the work. All three to be elected by the people at the time for electing judges, each member to be elected for a term of six years and disqualified to serve more than one term, the terms of office of the three members to expire in such order as to make the board as far as these three members are concerned a continuous body.

Fourth. Two of the three elective members to be men, one of whom is to be a practical educational man whose minimum education qualifications render him qualified to teach in any free high school of the state and the other a practical business man. Let it also be required that these two men shall belong to different political parties.

Fifth. The third of the three elective members to be an unmarried woman who is a graduate of either a Normal school or the state university or of some other school having a legal standing in the state equivalent to our state Normal schools. (Political affiliations unknown.)

Some of the points in favor of a system such as it above outlined would be as follows:

1. The entire board would be elective, thus bringing the management of these great institutions nearer to the people who are taxed to support them.

2. Being a smaller body it would be much easier to fix responsibility.

3. The three elective members by devoting their entire time and attention to the problem would soon become experts in regard to all matters pertaining to the organization and management of the schools under their charge.

4. The board would represent not one system but both systems and would therefore stand for a policy broad enough to bring about the best possible relations between them. Furthermore, under such a board satisfactory relations would be much more likely to be established between the high schools and the university and Normal schools.

In conclusion let me say that the opinions offered above are not to be taken as representing the opinions of the state department of education of which I am a member.

DOLLS FROM PANAMA.

Four little grotesque Panama dolls, such as delight the hearts of the children who dwell on the isthmus, were received as Christmas gifts by the children of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Reed. The dolls were the gift of their uncle, George Whitney and came all the way from Panama. Despite the fact that the dolls had been carefully packed, the long journey from the tropics proved too strenuous and two of the little fellows were taken from their box in a sorely dilapidated condition.

These two unfortunate have since been resting in the office of the American Express Company where they have proved objects of more or less curiosity. In appearance, these strange Panama productions present a great contrast to the magnificent kid and wax dolls so familiar to the little girls of America, but we venture to say that in their native land they are cherished dearly. With their coarse black hair, shining oval faces, and slanting eyes, attired in the various hues native garb, they do not differ but slightly from the rick babies which we have often endeavored to hit with base-balls at the county fairs.

ANNUAL MEETING OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The annual meeting of the Congregational Church occurred Monday evening at the church. The reports of the officers were read and showed a good condition of the different departments of the church. The Society voted that a unanimous call be given to Mr. Farinham of Oshkosh to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Wilson. Mr. Farinham has filled the pulpit recently and was well liked by the congregation and church board. The following were elected officers for the year 1907:

Trustees—S. B. Gary, R. C. Dayton, C. P. Crosby.

Deacons—Seth Kimball, C. P. Crosby.

Deaconesses—Mrs. Tuttle, Mrs. Jenkinson.

Treasurer—C. P. Crosby.

Clerk—Dr. S. R. Stone.

The general regret that Mr. Wilson does not see his way clear to remain pastor of the Congregational Church. He has become very popular in the City both in the church and as a man among men. Mr. Wilson has not yet decided where he will locate. It may be some weeks before he accepts any call.

HARDLY A SUCCESS

MR. BIRDSALL'S EXPERIENCE WITH "WHIRLED EGGS."

Seemingly He Had Not Sufficient Expertness, and in His Wrath He Exclaimed Almost as David in His Haste.

All was peace in the Birdsall flat. The last of the five children had been put to bed, the last request for a drink of water had been silenced, and Mrs. Birdsall had come into the sitting room to slink down to a chair with a little tired sigh to take up the cradle of the children's stockings. And now naught was heard save the crackle of Mr. Birdsall's paper as he adjusted his feet into a more comfortable position on the seat of another chair. Suddenly he took his feet down, shoved his spectacles up further on his nose, and cleared his throat.

"Ann, did you ever eat any whirled eggs?" he queried.

"Whirled eggs?" repeated Mrs. Birdsall. "No, I never did."

"Listen here, then," said Mr. Birdsall. He cleared his throat again and began to read:

"There is a Turkish restaurant in New York where one may eat platters, sherberts and saffron-colored goat stew, but the oddest dish the menu boasts is 'whirled eggs.' The impressive dish is prepared before the guest. When it is ordered a cook enters the dining room with a kind of sling in his hand—a little pot attached to the end of a leather cord. The man opens the eggs, seasons them, and shuts them up in the little pot. Then he whirls the pot at the end of its cord around his head at inconceivable speed. Round and round it spins, its outlines becoming vague. It seems to smoke a little."

"Suddenly the man opens it and sets the eggs before the guest. They are beautifully scrambled and quite hot. The heat of their motion through the air is what has cooked them."

"Thus," exclaims the Turkish host, 'the eastern shepherds cook their eggs, whirling them in a sling like that where-with David overcame the giant of Gath.'"

"The next night Mr. Birdsall appeared at his home with a bundle under his arm."

"Henry, what are you fixing to do?" exclaimed Mrs. Birdsall.

"Do?" repeated Mr. Birdsall. "I'm going to whirl some eggs, that's what I'm going to do. No more of your fried eggs, and your poached eggs, and your boiled eggs for me. I'm going to have 'em whirled.'"

Mrs. Birdsall knew better than to interpose any objections, and went quietly on with her preparations for dinner while Mr. Birdsall was unwrapping his package.

In a few minutes he entered the dining room, swishing in his hand a pair of things, from which was suspended a small closed pot which bore some resemblance both to a censer and a sling.

"Gimme some eggs now," he ordered, as he broke into a cheerful whistle. Mrs. Birdsall brought three eggs and Mr. Birdsall looked almost gay as he broke them into the small pot.

"I wasn't any slouch with a sling in my boyhood days," he observed cheerfully as he gathered up the things in his hand, "and I have an idea that I can show a thing or two about whirling to Turkey or any other daze. Here—move this table out of my way and gimme plenty of room. Keep the children back there, and don't come inside the door yourself while I am whirling. It may take me a moment or two to get the right swing again."

Mr. Birdsall fitted the cover on the top of the pot, grasped the things, and slowly began to whirl the apparatus. Gradually he lifted his hand and put more power into his wrist till he had attained considerable speed. Round and round sped the pot, the things flying out a low, humming sound, which gradually became higher and higher as the speed increased. Mr. Birdsall stuck manfully at his task till the revolving pot became a circular blur above his head and the drops of perspiration trickled down his forehead.

Suddenly there was a loud pop. Mrs. Birdsall entered the room shrieking. The top of the pot crashed through the dining room window. The body of the pot veered around and landed, with a resounding whack on the back of Mr. Birdsall's neck. One of the things had evidently broken.

Mr. Birdsall dropped his apparatus and stared in dazed fashion at his wife, who was removing a sticky, yellow mass from her face with her apron. On a level with his head, the four walls of the room were decorated with a broad, splattered yellow band, from which little yellow drops were slowly trickling down the flowered wallpaper. The back of Mr. Birdsall's neck was streaming raw yellow egg and raw egg was splattered freely over the carpeted floor.

Mr. Birdsall stood speechless and agast for a moment, and seemed unable to find words. His wife gazed at him with frightened eyes. Then Mr. Birdsall's countenance became suffused with rage.

"Ann," he howled, "the fellow who wrote that yarn was an infernal liar!"

For Flat Dwellers.

"One half the world doesn't know how the other half lives," quoted his wife.

"No," rejoined her husband, "but it keeps about nine-tenths of that half busy trying to find out."

Priest Too Stodious.

When Rev. Fr. Coyle assumed charge of St. Mary's church in Boston a gentleman of the city, who had an employee, a very devout Catholic, inquired of him how he liked his new pastor.

"Why, sir, I like him pretty well," "Pretty well? Why, what fault have you to find with him?" "To tell the truth, sir, I should have preferred a man who had finished his education; for several times when I have waited upon him I have been told that he was at his studies."

CHEESE MAKERS SCORED.

At the annual meeting of the Cheese Makers' Association Wednesday, the President of the Association told the 300 or more cheese makers present, that much of the milk received at cheese factories was impure and fit for nothing in the food line. A resolution probably will be adopted urging the Wisconsin Dairy School to refuse state certificates to cheese makers who are known to disregard rules relative to pure milk. This step in the right direction. Our cheese should be as pure as other articles of food.

APPLETON, - WIS. VISITS RHINELANDER REGULARLY. RAPIDS HOUSE

An Invitation to a Funeral

DEAR MADAM: For several years past some cloaks have been left on my hands each season. Each Fall I have religiously packed these left-over cloaks in moth balls and consigned them to my warehouse in the basement. I have not shown these garments to my customers since stowing them away, as it is my inviolable rule to display in my store only up-to-date stylish merchandise.

I do this because I don't want any of my customers going around in public looking as if they bought their clothes from a Mail-Order House.

These stow-away cloaks, mackintoshes and shirtwaists now number one hundred and eleven, and I have decided to get the entire lot off my premises this month.

Some are for women, some are for misses, and some are for children. Some look as if they came out of the ark, and some look as if they were called for and couldn't come.

All are old style, and will make you look like a scarecrow (unless you alter them). The materials are as good as new and better wool is higher and it is possible that you can alter them to fit your needs around the house. However, I don't believe that you can ever afford to appear in public wearing one of them.

I consider them "dead" stock, and this sale is to be their real funeral. They are in the back part of the store now ("the morgue"), and you can see them if you present this letter.

No one will be admitted to "the morgue" without this invitation, as this sale is for the special benefit of former folks.

While taking this enormous loss on this lot of cloaks, I want to make a few friends, so that this sale will have an advertising value to this store for months to come.

The only things that I can say in these garments' favor is that the retail prices of some of them were formerly $8.00, $10.00, $12.00 and $15.00. In fact the average retail prices of the entire lot was about $6.75 per cloak.

The materials are perfect. They are good enough to wear while milking the cows, feeding the chickens, and slopping the pigs, and they will keep you as warm as costlier garments.

These cloaks are on sale now (in the back part of the store) to all who hold these letters. Pick as you will. Those sold for $12.00 and $15.00, now $1.93. Those sold for $8.00 and $10.00 now $1.23. Mackintoshes, Cravennettes and Waists 93c

STANDARD OIL LOSES

JUDGE LANDIS SAYS COMPANY MUST STAND TRIAL.

VICTORY FOR UNCLE SAM

Jurist Renders Decision at Chicago Holding That Only Two of the Ten Indictments Are Insufficient.

Chicago.—The Standard Oil company must stand trial on all but two of the ten indictments returned against it. The contentions of the government were sustained in all but these two contentions in the opinion handed down by Judge Landis in the United States circuit court Thursday, and under his ruling the oil trust will be compelled to fight against the imposition of fines under these indictments, which amount in all to $123,000,000.

The two indictments found to be insufficient are considered of minor importance and District Attorney Sims considers the ruling of the court a complete victory for the government, wiping out as it does the immunity built up by the attorneys for the Standard Oil.

It is expected that the cases can be brought to trial some time during the present term and preparations are being made by the district attorney for a bitter fight. With the last technically wiped out to a question of fact, the fact at issue being whether the Standard Oil company was given a rebate by the railroads over which it shipped its oil out of Whiting, Ind.

The point raised by the defense was that the indictments were returned after the Elkins law had been repealed and before the new rate law went into effect and that therefore there was in existence no law under which they could properly have been indicted. Judge Landis held this reasoning to be without foundation, citing numerous cases and sections of the United States statutes in support of his position.

TEXAN UPHOLDS PRESIDENT.

Culberson Opposes Foraker Resolution on Discharge of Negroes.

Washington.—After two weeks of vacation the senate sat for two and a half hours Thursday and then adjourned until Monday. The session was devoted entirely to the further discussion of President Roosevelt's order dismissing the negro troops of the Twenty-fifth Infantry for "shooting up" Brownsville, Tex.

Senator Culberson of Texas, defended the order, bringing to its support many points of legal construction and justifying the action by many quotations taken in connection with the affair. He closed with an impassioned statement of the position of the south on the negro question, which he declared to be the most vital and dangerous problem before the American people.

Senator Foraker replied briefly, expressing his intense interest in having speedy action on his resolution for an investigation. Senator Lodge proposed an amendment to this resolution, which has the effect of admitting the president's authority as commander-in-chief of the army to take the action he did, and of restricting the investigation to the occurrence in Brownsville.

On motion of Senator Hiram Blount the resolution was given the right of way Monday.

MOLDERS ARE SENT TO JAIL.

Leaders of Milwaukee Strike Sentenced for Violating Injunction.

Milwaukee.—Judge A. L. Sanborn, of the United States district court, pronounced judgment Thursday evening in the cases growing out of the contempt proceedings which were brought, alleging violation of the injunction granted the Allis-Chalmers company against the molders' unions and striking molders. No fines were imposed, but in each case where found guilty the judgment was for imprisonment in the county jail.

Michael Hatzbaum, chairman of the strike committee of Iron Molders' union No. 125, and John Lutz, treasurer of the strike committee of the same union, were sentenced to imprisonment in the county jail for 30 days.

William Hennig, convicted of assault was sentenced to 40 days in jail. Two pickets were given 30 days each and two other strikers were given sentences of 15 days.

HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST IN THE VARIOUS TOWNS.

ARREST DEPUTY SHERIFF

Homer E. Royce, Prominent in Kenosha, Charged with Warning Resort Keepers That a Raid Was to Be Made.

Kenosha.—Deputy Sheriff Homer E. Royce, proprietor of the Hotel Kenosha and one of the best known men of the city, was held to the circuit court here on a charge of having given information of a proposed raid on a resort west of the city. Royce was held largely on the testimony of an operator of the Kenosha Telephone company, who claims that the call to the resort on the night of the raid was from the Hotel Kenosha. She refused to state that Royce had called in person, but other evidence showed that Royce had been informed of the proposed raid just a few minutes before the telephone call was registered. Royce gave bonds in the sum of $500.

Old Man Sent to Prison.

Wausau.—Charles La Pointe, aged 60 years, pleaded guilty here to the charge of kidnapping his 16-year-old granddaughter, Edith La Pointe. He was sentenced by Judge Marchetti to four years in Waupun. La Pointe came from his home at Ogdensburg, Ky., last spring to visit his son, Thomas La Pointe, who resides near Moon, Marathon county. On December 18 he started for Wausau with his granddaughter to purchase some Christmas gifts. They failed to return home, and a warrant was sworn out for the old man's arrest. The couple were found living at Marinette by Deputy Sheriff Harold Dannon and brought to Wausau. The only excuse La Pointe gave was that the girl was ill treated at home. This was proven to be false.

Rumor of Paper Syndicate.

Appleton.—A print paper syndicate, capitalized at several million dollars, including every newspaper mill in Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota is in process of formation, according to a semi-official report. The syndicate is said to have been decided upon to take the place of the General Paper company, which was ordered out of existence by the federal courts because its operations were contrary to the Sherman anti-trust law.

Aged Scholar Is Penniless.

Kaukaun.—Formerly a practicing physician of New York, a master of seven languages, an accomplished musician and a world traveler, Thomas Duse laid out all one night exposed to the storm, and is alive to tell of his experience. He is 77 years of age and was a soldier of the civil war. He traveled over South America in his younger days and at last became afflicted with epilepsy.

Child Dies of Scalding.

Milwaukee.—Elmer Heth, the three-year-old son of Edward Heth, an Eighteenth street tailor, died at his home from injuries sustained several days ago in falling into a tub of scalding water. The mother was preparing the water for the child's bath and while securing cold water the child fell into the tub and was scalded.

Eaton Returns to Beloit.

Beloit.—Dispatches received from St. Johnsbury, Vt., announced that the Rev. E. D. Eaton has resigned his pastorate there to take effect April 3, and will reenter upon the duties of president of Beloit college. It has been stated by friends for some time that Dr. Eaton would succeed himself as president of Beloit college.

Socialist Berger Is Dead.

Milwaukee.—Dr. Henry C. Berger, recently ousted from the Social Democratic party of Wisconsin, after a sensational clash with his brother, Victor L. Berger, a socialist among the American Federation of Labor members, dropped dead from heart disease while attempting to leave a train at the Racine depot.

Became Suddenly Insane.

Racine.—Frederick Kiofand, a prominent farmer of Caledonia, who was taken to St. Mary's hospital suffering from nervous breakdown, became suddenly insane, creating a panic in the hospital. It required the services of several policemen and citizens to overpower and remove him to the jail.

THREE GENERATIONS AT KEY.

Death of Woman Station Agent at Muscoda Recalls Peculiar Record.

Muscoda.—Mrs. L. B. Thurber, aged 68 years, died of apoplexy at her home at this place. When the Milwaukee road 44 years ago first built its line through here Mrs. Thurber's father, Dan Soper, was installed as its operator and agent. After a number of years acting in that capacity he died and the office was turned over to his daughter, who in time was married to L. B. Thurber. As the office business increased she had her husband appointed agent for the company, these people conducting the office for 35 years. Five years ago Mrs. Thurber resigned, and her son, P. L. Thurber, was given the office as operator, his father acting as agent. During the period of Mrs. Thurber as operator and Mr. Thurber as agent five sons and one daughter were born to them.

ADVENTIST SCHOOL BURNS.

Bethel Academy at Arpin Destroyed and One Hundred Narrowly Escape.

Marshfield.—Bethel academy, the Seven Day Adventists' school and headquarters for that denomination in Wisconsin, was destroyed by fire. The academy is situated near Arpin, 12 miles from this city. It is attended by over 100 students and is in the center of a large Adventist colony. The building was a modern frame structure. Its value was $15,000, and insurance $3,500. Plans for rebuilding the structure are now being considered. The inmates barely escaped, but no lives were lost.

Wife Gives Heyl $300,000.

Milwaukee.—Judge Halsey in the circuit court granted a divorce to Mrs. Clara S. Heyl from Jacob Heyl. There was no contest, Heyl having withdrawn his answer to his wife's complaint. He was not present in court but was represented by counsel.

In the division of property by agreement the sum of $225,000 of life insurance of the defendant is assigned to Mrs. Heyl as well as Heyl's half interest in the Schandeln-Heyl library.

Heyl relinquishes all claims against the Schandeln estate, amounting to about $100,000, and also his fees as executor, amounting approximately to $60,000. Mrs. Heyl pays over to the defendant sums aggregating $300,000, partly in real estate and partly in first mortgage bonds, and about $50,000 cash.

Mrs. Heyl is awarded the custody of her two children, Reinhardt, aged 15, and Helmut, 13 years, but at the age of 16 years the boys are to choose for themselves between the parents.

Tells How He Butchered Girl.

Ellsworth.—Michael Lio, indicted for the murder of John Isaac at Prescott, Wis., but who was discharged by the court, has confessed here that he murdered Marie Labritz in New York on the night of May 27, 1902, and then cut up her body. He said he had spent lots of money on the girl. "I paid her way to this country; she promised to marry me; she went with some other fellow; I told her she had to marry me; then she said she did not know me. Then I killed her; then I cut her up."

The New York authorities have taken their prisoner back with them.

Hill to Get Wisconsin Road.

Milwaukee.—Announcement is expected within a short time, according to a prominent railroad man who is identified with the Wisconsin Central system, to the effect that this railway has been absorbed to all intents and purposes by the Great Northern and other Hill interests.

Negotiations have almost been concluded to give the Wisconsin Central an entrance into Milwaukee over the newly incorporated Milwaukee Southern railway, which intends to build from here to St. Louis.

Big Bargain List of Pianos Free.

A list that is the largest that has ever been compiled, comprising fine pianos, has just been issued by Lyon & Healy. This list contains many Steinways, Wabers, Krakauers, Washburns, Sterlings, Huntingtons and other well-known pianos. Moreover, the particulars of each instrument are given, so that the buyer may judge for himself whether or not the piano is a bargain.

This list will interest persons who want a very good piano, for the reason that many of these instruments are slightly used in name only, that is, they have had exhibition use in show windows or have been used for brief periods in artists' studios.

The prices quoted are phenomenally low. Lyon & Healy are making a determined effort to close out several hundred instruments of this description within the next 30 days, and the prices have been reduced very materially.

Send for a copy of this list. If you do not wish to pay all cash for a piano, you can arrange for monthly payments on a portion of the price. The only difference in the cost would be 6 per cent on deferred payments. Address Lyon & Healy, 10 Adams Street, Chicago.

Lyon & Healy exhibit the largest and most varied stock of pianos in the world—over 1,000 instruments.

THE FORESTRY MOVEMENT.

None too soon—in many respects too late—has the movement commenced in this country, and more especially in Michigan, for the preservation and restoration of the forests.

It appears, in a bulletin just issued by our national agricultural department, that the forest service of the United States is to become united with the International forest experiments stations.

The countries already belonging to this association are Germany, Austria, France, Italy, Russia, and Switzerland.

The science of forestry is comparatively well established in the European nations named. For years their governments have maintained corps of experts who have made an exhaustive study of forestry in those countries. That the newly established forest service of this country should be received into this association equal terms with the service of these six nations is the best evidence that this government has made great progress in the brief time that its forest service has been in existence.

The problem involved in the work undertaken by this bureau of the agricultural department are vital to the people of the United States. There is scarcely a natural resource, with the single exception of the soil itself, more important to the welfare of the people and possessing greater intrinsic value than the forests. And no more shortsighted piece of folly is to be attributed to us as a people than the reckless manner in which we have squandered the priceless heritage bestowed on us by nature.

Already the forest reserves of this country comprise a total of 127,000,000 acres and the government experts in the last ten years have contributed vastly to the scientific knowledge of forestry both in this country and Europe. Much of the damage that has been done is irreparable. Millions of acres on hill and mountainsides that have been denuded must of necessity be forever worthless, as the soil that once bore gigantic forests has been washed away beyond all possibility of restoration. But there are still other vast tracts which have been stripped bare which can again be restored to approximately natural condition and it is to this highly important work that the forest service is dedicated.

SERVED UNDER HERO

DEATH OF ENGLISHMAN WHO FOUGHT WITH GARIBALDI.

Gen John Dunne Rendered Distinguished Service, to the Cause of United Italy—Celebrated for His Acts of Daring.

Gen. John Dunne died recently at the Victoria Memorial Hospital, Nice, at the age of nearly 80. He began his career in the English army, and in the Crimean war distinguished himself as an officer of Irish Razouks. He left the English service with the rank of captain, and in 1860 began his romantic career under Garibaldi.

At the request of La Farina (who was acting under Cavour's orders) he took with him to Sicily a Sicilian patriot named Giacinto Scelzi, who went disguised as his servant. Scelzi was compromised in the patriotic movement in Sicily in 1818, and probably would have been shot if taken. The two landed at Messina, and then took a small boat to a village on the coast, where they were well received and soon gathered volunteers, of whom Dunne became leader.

Marching and fighting their way across the mountains, the little band reached Palermo in time to take part in the last day of the struggle before the capitulation of the Bourbon commander-in-chief. Dunne took Scelzi to Garibaldi, to whom he also delivered a secret message written on a small piece of paper which he had been ordered to destroy if captured.

At Palermo Dunne raised and disciplined what henceforth went by the name of the Reggimento Dunno or Reggimento Inglese, but the men were almost all Sicilians, chiefly Palermitans. They fought splendidly on the critical occasion of the battle of Milazzo, where their timely arrival saved the fortunes of the day.

Later, on the mainland, they were incorporated in the brigade which Dunne commanded at the battle of Volturno, where he was so severely wounded that his life was thought to be in danger. He was celebrated for acts of great daring, and at the same time he always preserved the quiet, gentle manners of a high bred English gentleman. Garibaldi trusted him entirely, and no officer who served under the Italian hero had a more loyal devotion to his chief.

He often said that Garibaldi's military ability had never been done justice to. He rated him as immeasurably superior to the generals under him, but he thought well of Cosenz, who was afterward minister of war. Gen. Dunne's great desire was to be received into the regular Italian army; but though the commission appointed to inquire into the claims of Garibaldi's officers reported highly in his favor, his wish was never gratified, because, though he had shed his blood for Italy and materially helped to free her, he was an Englishman. He received all the Italian decorations, including the Savoy Order for military valor.

Dr. Capen Was Ready.
Dr. Samuel B. Capen, while president of Tufts College, once delivered the diplomas to the grammar school graduates in Malden, and in his address to the scholars used the word "neither" with the letter "i" silent, but giving some quotations pronounced the same word with an apparent accent on the letter "i." A gentleman who was present asked the learned doctor later whether the word was "neither" or "nither."

Suspecting a little quizzing from the twinkle in his questioner's eye, the president replied "that query was answered long ago in this way: An inexperienced young woman asked an older matron what she should use for a fruit pudding. 'Raspberries or dried grapes,' the matron answered quickly, 'either or either.'

Where He Rubbed It.
Southward from the summit of Mt. Mooshauc and near its base lies the pretty little village of Warren, N. H. Here lives the town's genius, whom everyone calls "Pat," one who is ever ready with his good nature and Irish wit to make friends with all.

One cold, rainy day the Methodist minister of the town met "Pat" on the street in his shirt sleeves and said, "Pat, you ought to have on your coat, you will catch your death of cold."

"Sure, I won't," replied Pat. "When I get a good soaking I use a little whiskey and always come out all right."

"But, Pat," said the minister, "May I ask where you rub it on?"

"You are too wise a man to ask such a question as that," replied Pat, with a laugh.

Bridget Was Willing to Work.
"We had at one time in our village," says a modern housekeeper, "a very simple young woman, who came to us through one of the registry offices in our town."

"She showed the quality of her intelligence on the very day she came. She was told to go out into the yard and take down the clothes line, which was stretched upon half a dozen posts set up for that purpose."

"Bridget was at the task so long that we began to wonder what on earth had become of her. We went out to see what she was doing, and found her working away vigorously with a spade. She had dug up three of the posts and had almost completed the work upon the fourth. She did not stay with us long!"—Sparto Moments.

Electrical Diving Rod.
An electrical diving rod, claimed to operate more certainly and scientifically than the ancient and discredited twigs, has been devised by Adolph Schmidt, a Swiss engineer. It seems to consist essentially of a glass covered box including a coil of insulated wire, in which a slightly magnetized needle is free to rotate over a graduated dial. When the apparatus is placed over subterranean water, with the axis of the coil in the magnetized meridian, the needle, it is asserted, oscillates more or less rapidly from two to ten, and even up to 50 degrees.
